Are You a Psychologist Climbing the Early Part of the Management Learning Curve?

Does your boss and staff already expect you to know the job?

The Society of Psychologists in Management (SPIM) can help. We are seasoned psychologist managers. We’ve been where you are and learned how to leverage psychological knowledge into superior management. Come learn from us!

You’ll have the chance to reflect on your own management journey and get advice on how to be more effective. You will learn how your psychological training gives you an edge, and how to use that edge.

SPIM is a thirty+ year old professional organization. Its members coach and consult to successful managers, are successful managers and leaders, and/or teach management at the university level. As psychologists, we share a common body of knowledge with you. As experts in management, we have mastered the skills you need to master. And we’re willing to share.

Joe Mosher is a Vice President and Executive Consultant with Leadership Worth Following, LLC. With LWF, Joe focuses and specializes in the areas of organizational development and effectiveness, leadership development and executive coaching, and talent assessment and management.

Cost: $600

Compare favorably to other management training offerings @ $750 and above. As an additional bonus, institute attendees will receive a discounted rate to attend the annual conference. (See www.spim.org for a description of our conference, and learn why it gets rave reviews for its quality).

Note: Seating is limited to 20. So, you won’t get lost in a crowd, but you do need to register as soon as possible to guarantee your spot.

Our Faculty

Marlene Thurn, PhD

Richard Canton, PhD

Joe Mosher, PhD

Dee Ramsel, MBA, PhD

Myranda Grahek, PhD

Joe Mosher is a Vice President and Executive Consultant with Leadership Worth Following, LLC. With LWF, Joe focuses and specializes in the areas of organizational development and effectiveness, leadership development and executive coaching, and talent assessment and management.

25 years experience as an executive, professor, and OD consultant. Assisted in the turnaround of several organizations, and serves as Executive Director of National Center for Organization Development, which delivers organization health and development initiatives for Veterans Affairs by integrating OD theory, research, training, and practice.

Myranda Grahek is the Senior Vice President and General Manager at Leadership Worth Following, LLC. With LWF since almost its inception, she has led every part of the business. As a business psychologist and consultant, her work focuses on helping organizations identify and develop leadership worth following.

What: Training Institute

Title: Transitioning from Psychologist to Psychologist-Manager: Leadership and Management Skills for Success.

Where: The Westin Buckhead Atlanta, GA

When: February 24 - 25, 2016

Day 1: 2:00PM - 6:00 PM,

Day 2: 8:00AM - 6:00 PM.

The Training Institute is one of a number of Pre-Conference offerings held just prior to the SPIM Conference (February 26-28).

How to Register:

Go to the SPIM website, at http://www.spim.org.
The courses offered during the Training Institute were well designed, informative, and presented in a format that promoted learning in a challenging yet supportive manner. The material thoroughly address the unique contributions that psychologists can make in the field of organizational management. The course work allowed the participants to benefit on a personal level, regardless of their levels of experience as managers. I found the course to be extremely rewarding for a number of reasons, but specifically two come to mind: The learning experience did much to reaffirm my commitment that my psychological training has served, and will continue to serve me well in my management career. Secondly, it offered me a wealth of information and resources that I have been able to tap into as I work with management teams within my corporate book of business. Without question, the Institute was a worthwhile investment and I would highly recommend it to anyone interested in sharpening their management skills within a framework of solid psychological principles.

Alan G. Morse, PhD

As a first time participant at the SPIM conference, I decided to go "all in" and attend the Training Institute. The material was well organized and highly informative, and the workshop facilitated a paradigm shift in my thinking about managing myself and my employees. I can't imagine a more precise, useful and practical process for preparing for the transition from clinician to manager. The Workshop included strategies and protocols for implementing change across multiple realms, all of which was reinforced by the invaluable coaching provided as a follow-up.

Philip D. Dupont, PhD

Excellent training! SPIM's 2012 Transitioning From Psychologist To Manager-Psychologist Training Institute provided the most thorough training I have received; I wish I'd had this enriching opportunity sooner. The instructors were knowledgeable, highly experienced, and enthusiastic about educating and encouraging participants. The content areas covered were relevant; specific models, tools and skills were described in sufficient detail that the material could be utilized immediately.

Heather Martarella, PsyD

As a first time manager, I was very excited to attend the SPIM Training Institute. Having stepped into a new Director role a couple of months prior to this workshop, I was looking for information on how to make the transition and resources for managing others. I found the Training Institute to be a tremendous benefit for me as a new Director. I continue to look back at the material and have implemented several of the strategies that were discussed regarding Strategic Planning and Managing Others. I learned so much about being a psychologist and a manager, the difficulties in serving in both roles, and developed greater awareness about the differences between the two. As a psychologist I felt only somewhat prepared to handle a management role, but after attending this institute I felt more confident in my leadership and management abilities. All of the workshop facilitators had extensive management experience which was extremely helpful in sharing information and preparing me for this role. I have used the phone coaching sessions to help me with strategic planning and have found it be very rewarding and helpful as I guide my staff through the planning process. I would highly recommend this Institute for any psychologist in a management role, as there is much to be learned and the group is very warm, welcoming, and professional. I can't wait to attend another SPIM conference.

Nicole Surething, PhD